

International Teaching Week 2026, 13. 4. 2026 - 17. 4. 2026

Artificial intelligence and its impact on business, life, education, and other key aspects of modern society

International Teaching Week 2026 at GEA College will bring together lecturers, researchers, and practitioners to explore the role of artificial intelligence in business, education, and society. Throughout the week, international experts will deliver guest lectures open to both participants and students, creating a dynamic environment for knowledge exchange and cross-cultural collaboration. This format enables participants to discover diverse teaching methodologies and deepen their professional expertise.

The programme combines interactive lectures, discussions, and the exchange of best practices, encouraging participants to reflect on AI-driven transformations and their practical implications. As part of the week, attendees can also take part in the ABSRC International Scientific Conference, which runs in parallel with the event. This overlap provides an exceptional opportunity to engage with research and participate in academic debates.

Beyond the academic agenda, International Teaching Week fosters meaningful networking, community building, and cultural exploration. Participants will have multiple opportunities to form new partnerships, share institutional experiences, and develop future collaborations.

Set in Ljubljana, Slovenia's charming and vibrant capital, the week offers a balanced blend of academic enrichment and cultural immersion.

VIRTUAL COMPONENT to the programme is obligatory and will be held online on 30. 3. 2026 at 10.00 CET.
